INSTRUCTIONS

Contents: 36 Truth Be Told Blocks

Set-up: Arrange the 36 pieces to form a tower with layers of 3 blocks alternating direction. Each block has a question printed on it. (Hint: for a more spontaneous game make sure that the words are hidden from view during play.)

Objective: Get all the dirt on your friends, but don't be the player who knocks down the truth tower!

Play: The youngest player goes first. The player chooses a block from the tower and – using only one hand – tries to remove it without knocking down the rest of the blocks. They read the question and hand the block to the person they want to answer the question. The recipient reads the question aloud and either answers or cops out. If they answer, the block is handed back, and the first player must place the block back on the tower. If they cop out and refuse to answer, then they must place the block themselves. The winner is the last person to successfully place a block on top of the stack without making the tower fall.

Cop-Out Blocks: There are 3 “Cop-Out” blocks in the game. When one of these pieces is pulled from the tower, it maybe be saved for play later in the game (You do not have to place it on the tower). Later, you can use the “Cop-Out” block when a question is given to you that you do not want to answer. You give the “Cop-Out” block and the question block back to the original reader forcing them to place both blocks on top of the tower.
